Lawrence, Salem, Haverhill, Lynn, Peabody, Lynnfield and Saugus Send Their Delegates.

BEVERLY. Mass .- Essex county's associated boards of trade, one of the strongest organizations of its type in Massachusetts, is having its annual meeting in Beverly today and an interesting program is being enoyed by the delegates from the various organizations which help to make up the association.

Five of the big cities of the county and several of the progressive towns which have boards of trade are represented in Beverly, with delegates from Beverly, Salem, Lynn, Haverhill and Lawrence, Peabody and Lynnfield and Saugus boards.

The delegates met at 2 p. m. at the board of trade rooms in the Mason building for a social session in the rooms which are used for the executive offices of President Taft during the summer

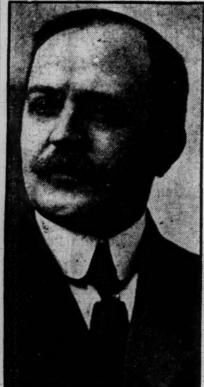

Later the party started on an automobile trip to the city, visiting the Essex county and Kernwood bridges to gain some idea of what the development of property, if the scheme of damming the Danvers river at the railroad bridge matures, will mean to Beverly Salem and Danvers. ## SENATE ALIGNMENT MEANS BIG CHANGES FOR NEXT CONGRESS

Withdrawal of Senators Hale and Aldrich Is Expected to Mean Loss of New England Dominance.

WEST GROWS EAGER

WASHINGTON-The election on Tuesday in the thirty-second New York district of James S. Havens, Democrat, for the national House of Representatives over his Republican opponent, George W. Aldridge, by nearly 5900 votes in a district that is normally Republican by about 10,000, together with the with-drawal of Senators Nelson W. Aldrich of Rhode Island and Eugene Hale of Maine, today throws a significant light over the political situation in this country.

The victory of Mr. Havens ranks with that of Eugene N. Foss in the fourteenth Massachusetts district.

Coupled with this there is all sorts of speculation today among Republican Senators as to the effect of the retirement of Senators Aldrich and Hale from public life on March 4 next.

The general impression among both regulars and insurgents seems to be that the withdrawal of these two leaders will mean the end of one-man authority in that body and the passing of that power to a good-sized group of men.

Under the changed conditions leadership in the Senate, it is believed, will resemble that exercised in the days before Senator Aldrich gained the ascendencythe days when responsibility and honors were shared about equally by Senator Platt of Connecticut, Senator Hanna of City hall will be the mecca for milk Ohio, Senator Allison of Iowa and Senator Aldrich.

The insurgents in the Senate pretty generally declined to discuss the retire-

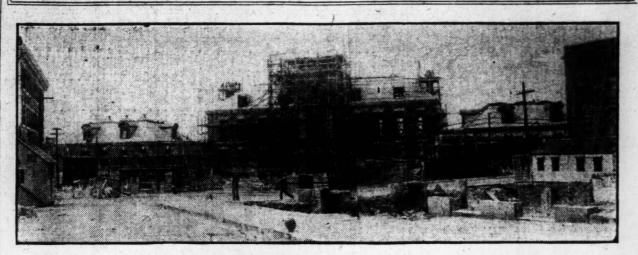

Another effect of the retirement of Senators Aldrich and Hale, as many members of the Senate view the situation, will be the passing of the unusually strong influence exerted by New England in the Senate and the relative increase of the influence of western states. # BEFORE COMMITTEE

The legislative committee which is investigating the Southbridge Savings Bank today closed its public hearing. Arthur A. Forness of the Beverly board cards are all addressed to Dr. Durgin of Aldridge in Rochester, so far as the thing now unforeseen arose all other hearings would be private.

The committee voted in executive session to report the result of its investigation on or before April 26.

Two trustees of the bank were before the committee today, Henry C. Cady, one of these, stated that he rarely attended any meetings, and had not read the law governing his duties. If the ommittee should report, he said, that e had been negligent in his duty he ould not criticize the committee for doing so. This condition, he said, however, was brought about in the light of affairs as they are today. People outside of Southbridge can hardly realize how much confidence was placed in Treasurer Hall. He believed that when the bank commissioners had made an examination of the bank everything was all right. Mr. Cady said that his actions would be very different today as a trustee of a bank, in view of his past expe-

Charles W. Hill, another trustee spoke very similarly to Mr. Cady, the only difference being that he had at tended meetings more regularly. F. F. bank commissioners. The chief criticism he made was that the bank commission should have known that the system of examination was falling short of what it was intended to lie library at a cost of not less than bill providing for the constructing as a funds to do the work properly. Had state highway of a part of Washington either the auditing committee or the bank commissioner looked into the affairs of the bank properly the present state of affairs would not have arisen.

Opinions of Boston Dealers Vary Concerning Future Cost of Beef, Though Several Predict a Drop.

Investigation throughout the Atlantic states today shows that wheat, corn, cotton, some of the metals and other commodities which lend themselves to speculative movements are on the decline, and the consumer has deduced from this fact a hope that the crest of high prices has been reached. Boston provision dealers today said that they are expecting such a decrease in the cost of foodstuffs.

Standard commodities which have recently undergone a downward price movement are given in the following table, which gives the high and low prices, highest and lowest prices reached this year, together with the lowest prices in 1909. The prices are in the cash markets in New York:

Wandrack, who has been trying the weights and jumps, has developed into a hurdler who bids fair to equal Pettibone, who is the mainstay of the purple in that event. Now that basketball is over, Heren, the captain of that team, has tried his ability at track and has made good, beating Schaeffer, the track captain, in the half mile, with a time of 2m. 12s. in his initial effort. With training this time can be cut down. Heren is also a valuable man in the mile.

Coach Horr has taken advantage of the warm weather to allow the discus and hammer throwers to work in the open. Bradley's performances in the broad jump are causing the purple supporters to smile; and the ex-ceptain is invincible in the short dashes, Beall cannot be approached in the mile and two mile events. Captain Schaeffer will take care of the quarter and Heren of the half mile. Pettibone and Wandrack are fast in the hurdles. Fletcher is the mainstay in the weights, while Moulton and Movius are doing well in the high jump. Watson is a good second to Beall in the distances; Hubbard is sure of a point in the quarter, and Munn in the 220. Manley, the football captain, is showing remarkable versatility in the broad jump, dashes and weights.

The handsome tower which will surmount the main part of the structure is of the Georgian type with an illuminated clock and will add greatly to the beauty of the building. We believe that Chelsea deserves the best public buildings possible to get and we are using every effort to secure the best."

Chief Henry A. Spencer of the fire department in speaking of the new building said: "Should another great fire ever take place in Chelsea our greatest strength in fighting it would lie in the fact that we have this large open space with a fireproof building in the center of the congested part of the city. While in its present half completed state the building does not seem very attractive, it is in no way fair to criticize it until

This drama is provided with every rostirring incident almost tumbles over the next, so closely do they pile up on recital. Imagine a handsome young Englishman who looks like the King of Ruritania suddenly being asked to impersonate that king, make love to his promised bride, and win her where the ring adventures and at the end rescue the man whom he impersonates and return to his role of private citizen. What more could be asked? Certainly none of the enthusiastic patrons of Mr. Craig's playhouse can, for they are showing to the full their pleasure in the play and the excellent acting.

Mr. Craig impersonates the dual characters with fine discrimination and looked really regal in his court paraphernalia, or so it seemed to us, who unlike the famous cat have never been privileged to gaze upon a king. Recently Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree produced "The School for Scandal," with a notable cast. The success of the production was so conspicuous that Lewis Waller's revival of "The Rivals" was an almost inevitable sequence. Nor is the cast at the Lyric less interesting than mantic episode known to the stage. One the one at His Majesty's. Waller himself plays Captain Absolute, with one of his scenes omitted, an omission most "demure face" has hardly the contrast of overwhelming gaiety, he has too much the air of the self-contained man of the world for so youthful a gallant. Excellent again as Mr. Somerset's Sir Anthony is, the old gentleman's violence almost ceases to be comedy. His idea of disciplining the rebellious Lydia is given without the sly chuckles that rob he punishment of half its severity.

The character of Mrs. Malaprop stands as the embodiment of the female dragon. Her blunders are Napoleonic. Like the facade of St. Peter's, if they do not command respect, at least they strike awe. The humor of the lady's mistakes, t must be admitted, has worn a little thin, but the woman remains a formidable warning to all pedants. Miss Lottie Venne is always amusing. The big words slip out of her little mouth with great ease, and the audience found her performance very funny and laughed at all her "Malapropisms" as if they were the freshest things imaginable.

In a production of such generad excellence it is difficult to choose this or that performance for special mention, but perhaps Leonard Boyne's Sir Lucius O'Trigger, and Loraine's Bob Acres, are the A Boston favorite, Miss Della Fox, gave kid gloves. Powers School Recital.

Floor, balconies and boxes of Steinert hall have been filled for two nights at the series of recitals given by the senior class of the Leland Powers school. On Monday evening, Miss Adelyn Bushnell won much applause by giving the entire fourth act of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," impersonating both Torwald and Nora. Miss Ina Frances Steiner accomplished the same difficult feat of impersonating several characters in the last act of Shakespeare's "Katherine and Petruchio." Miss Lois Secor read a cutting from Dicken's "Christmas Carol"; Miss Cordelia Keith from "A Tragedy in Millinery" by Kate Douglas Wiggin; Miss Annie Clisby from the "Guardian of the Accolade" by Henry; Otis Earle Knight a scene from "David Copperfield."

THE LIBRARY ALCOVE

Colleges are largely supported by half the library buildings of the country do not satisfy the requirements of modern library work. They were built before library management had developed into a profession. They were built by without the tremendous endowments given them by graduates and former students most of these institutions could not exist. These donations are given them by graduates and former was consulted and so, however well they look, they work poorly. A new building, or the old building radically reconstructed, is needed in many towns and cities. with pride and received without shame. And after these books are bought they in giving their mother the aid she needs. ought to spend two or three times as It is a pleasant family arrangement much more to buy these books over satisfactory and edifying to all contains of a disgrace to a public library university. Most men and women can be students of no other college. Most men and women, if they are so disposed, can get an education from the public library, as far at least as book-knowledge is concerned, which may be a very fair equivalent of a college education. It is, at any rate, safe enough to say that there are some people educated in the public library who are as well educated as some people who have been educated in some colleges. When a person cannot go to college he can, if he is made of the right stuff, make the public library a very fair substitute.

Now why should not such persons as these, if they are prospered in the world, remember substantially the only alma mater they ever knew—the public library? Andrew Carnegie, out of his gratitude for the help he received from books loaned him when a boy, has almost put a girdle of library buildings around the world. These are gifts not to be underestimated, and the communities that Mr. Carnegie has thus helped should feel profoundly grateful to him. But a public library building does not run itself; and the great need in all libraries is a largely increased amount of funds. There must be thousands of library alumni who, if they really knew and felt this condition of affairs, would be glad to share some of their wealth with the institutions that have helped them so much.

Perhaps the great reason that public libraries do not receive a larger number of bequests and gifts is due to the impression that they are adequately sup-ported by public appropriation. But nothing can be farther from the truth. Most towns and cities give their public libraries all they can afford, or, at least, all they think they can afford. But the sums granted are inadequate to build up a progressive and advancing institution. The large colleges receive a handsome sum of money in the form of tuition fees from the students. But, if colleges were dependent upon these tuition fees alone, they would be obliged to discontinue their work. Libraries dependent upon public appropriations alone cannot be upon public appropriations alone cannot the upon public appropriations alone cannot the upon public appropriation alone cannot the upon these tuition fees alone, they would be obliged to discontinue their work. Libraries dependent upon these tuition fees alone, they would be obliged to discontinue their work. Libraries dependent upon public appropriation alone cannot the upon the upo

Why should not the public library A library in a city of 100,000 inhabiconfidently expect gifts and endowments tants that has only one copy of Taine's from its alumni also? The public library, "English Literature" cannot be accused as has so often been said, is the people's of extravagant expenditure in its efforts to serve the public.

> The great need of most public libraries is a generous duplication and reduplication of good books. The more expensive, finely illustrated books should be found in the public library. These are books that the great majority of the public can never own; and if they cannot be found in the public library the great majority of the public can never see them. But such works as these are utterly beyond the reach of many public libraries. Their appropriations do not furnish them sufficient funds. The generous alumni can, if they will, enable these libraries to purchase these books that many people want, but, under present conditions, can never hope to see.

> The government is to carry free of postage certain books. The public library, if it had the funds, might deliver its books free of charge to the homes of the busy mother with small children and to others.

It might hire a telephone librarian who should have a telephone in his department with a special number of its own. All persons desiring information of any kind should be free to call him up. Then people sitting in their own homes could tap the library's reservoir of knowledge without rising from their chairs. Innumerable ways of spending more money usefully will occur to any librarian. He will dispose of all funds that the generous library alumni may give him in a way that will benefit the public. Let all library alumni—and they are wooden spatula is best for this, but a the temperature is at all times below think this over.

BUSINESS IS LIGHT

Another drive at the copper issues un settled both the New York and Boston markets today. The tone was heavy shortly after the opening and although business was quiet in Wall street prices were inclined to move downward under slight pressure.

There was nothing new of a disturbing nature but the continued lack of support from the big interests was not relished by smaller traders who turned to the bear side in the hope of making a tack. The bears made much of the poor showing of the North Butte company and

The bears in New York had a good deal to say regarding the defeat of another Republican candidate for Congress on Tuesday and growing out of this were predictions of a Democratic House. However, the market did not seem to be in need of much of an excuse for selling off. The lack of support was enough to induce a lower level.

QUESTION OF PRICE

The decline in wool prices in the Bos ton market has had the desired effect o moving a lot of stock, although it i doubtful if very much of the supply recently disposed of netted the sellers the equivalent of the original cost plus the accumulated charges of carrying it to the present time.

Merchants are now sending out their buyers to the far West for the new sea son's clip, a number having started since the tenth of the month for the territory wool sections where shearing is now un-present at least, of which they ...1663 167 164 164 take much account.

There will be no little curiosity to note the bidding at the London sales which begin April 26. Predictions differ regarding the probable price level. In England the trade realizes that there is a very large supply of wool available from Australasia, and in some quarters a disposition to curb the tendency to 2934 bid prices up is manifested. The exact relation of demand to the supply is not quite determinable at present, however, 2% and the market continues to hold its strength. The character of the bidding at the coming series is expected to afford a more accurate gauge of market conditions in this respect than individual transactions of the past few weeks have reflected. About 160,00 bales are expected. One of the factors which may be productive of a decline, especially in medium crossbreds, which were easier at the last series than they had been previously, is the lack of strong demand from the United States that is anticipated. Takings for America at the January and March sale aggregated only 18,000 bales, agains about 30,000 bales at the first two serie of 1909. The third series a year ago of 1909. The third series a year ago corresponding to the sales about to be 65% gin, resulted in the purchase of some 23, 54 certain that nothing like this quantity

C. F. & G. W. Eddy, Inc., of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, received the following from their Chicago correspondent:

Wheat-The wheat market was active this year than in the first four months at new low levels. The cables were deof 1909. This is for the present a favor-able factor, inasmuch as the amount of surplus stock carried over to the new Chicago May was down 1%. From the 71% wool year is large and shipments are decline there was slight rally, but there 100% about 10,000,000 pounds less for the year seemed to be a great deal of wheat for 89% to date than they were in the corresale. The July wheat was carried below the dollar mark at Chicago and quotations were down 10 cents a bushel from the high level of a short time ago. The Northwestern Miller report states that seeding is finished in southern Minnesota and South Dakota and about 85 per cent finished in North Dakota. Corn-Was active and lower with de-BRONZES BRING HIGH PRICES.

SALESMEN HOPEFUL

work in harmony. Other interests, such as wool, cotton, iron and cereals, by their conditions sway the action of their kindred markets. But it is well known that though the hide and leather market may rise in price, it requires time before its influence is manifested in the price of footwear.

Even though the shoe manufacturer is satisfied that he cannot replace his stock of leather at former prices, it is not uncommon for him to accept contracts at prices based on the original cost of his leather and continue to do so until his stock is exhausted.

This peculiar custom is practised by shoe manufacturers almost universally but the prices of all other commoditie awaken into activity with the rise of their raw material. This course of procedure seems unchangeable, perhaps be cause of keen competition, having beer practised since Fulton street was the shoe and leather headquarters of this

The disturbing influence which swept over the shoe market this spring, cause 534 by the weakening of leather prices, ha buyers that prices are now as low a they will be this season. This is evinced by the large volume of orders placed during the last 10 days, Inquiry brings the information that many factories are now being pushed to their full capacity and the traveling men start out expect ing good orders. With hides up 1/2c, and with firmness indicating a still further advance, crops promising as per government reports rubber footwear up 10 per cent over wha it was six months ago, wages advanced, Yuma or about to be throughout the whole country, conservative operators are convinced that they may place their contracts without fear of coming in contact with the live wire of low tendencies. The failure in the Northwest in the past week was startling, as it came as a surprise to this market, but its disturbing effect will soon fade away, and concern only those directly interested. This is too great a market for one failure to cause any considerable ill effect, even though it be one with a large indebtedness, especially when it is taken into consideration that there are included in this market over 600 shoe manufacturing

A signficant incident took place during the past week, worthy of mention, slight as it was. A southern shoe buyer placed with one of the leading manufacturers orders for three separate seasons, one of which was for this summer's trade, another for the coming fall trade and still another, for samples of the spring and summer trade of 1911. Business taken as a whole frequently possesses elements which puzzle the wisest merchants. Notwithstanding the season has been unusually favorable for the sale of iight footwear, and the wholesalers report entire satisfaction with their spring business, still the figures show a falling off of shipments, up to last Thursday, of over 69,000 cases compared with 1909 shipments to the same

Several new shoe manufacturing concerns have sprung into existence this season, two of which may be reckoned as more than ordinary.

A walk through the leather district showed evidences of a brighter outlook The shoe manufacturer, being forced out of his lethargy by the pressure of orders, has been a frequent visitor to the waiting and patient leather merchant, who is interested, though indirectly, in the trade of his customer.

Light splits appear to be a drug on the market, but heavy splits are held with some degree of firmness, partly from the fact that they can be put to various uses in shoe construction, as they are fit to be finished in several ways to suit the requirements of the shoe-

However, splits no longer influence the price of other leathers as they are now onsidered a byproduct, and the demand former years.

The traveling men are arranging their trip schedules; and before 10 days have passed the vanguards will be on their way south and west with samples for the spring and summer of 1911.

April 27. At a meeting of the trustees of the Central Trust Company of New York Tuesday an extra dividend of $9 per share was declared, payable on May 2 to holders of record April 23, 1910. As the company has been paying regular quarterly dividends of $9 per share since the capitalization was increased from $1,-000,000 to $3,000,000 last June, this makes a distribution of $45 per share for the first fiscal year since the capitalization was increased. The declaration of an extra dividend at this time is, moreover, in accord with the custom of the company for the past eight years, as the rate of dividends prevailing from 1903 to 1909 was 15 per cent quarterly, with an extra dividend of $20 per share payable in May, or 80 per cent annually on the old capitalization of $1,000,000.

MORE TRAFFIC ALLIANCE RUMORS

NEW YORK - The announcement from the West that a traffic agreement had been arranged between the Hill roads and the Gould lines by which the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy would use the Western Pacific branch of the Denver & Rio Grande was premature.

It is learned that the subject of a traffic alliance has been under discussion by officials of the respective companies, but a conclusion has not yet been reached. The chances are thought to be good for the arrangement of a deal eventually.

Recently some of the officials of the Hill roads made a tour of inspection over the Western Pacific. It is stated they found physical conditions satisfactory.

The Test of Civilization

A man of figures once declared that three statistical facts reveal the civilized status of a nation. First, the quantity of sugar consumed per capita by its people; next, the amount of soap they use per annum; third, how the men treat the women. In this connection William E. Curtis, the modern newspaper correspondent, has written: "The test of civilization is the estimate of women.

The first item in the threefold analysis above stated gives a clue to how well the people are fed; the second, how clean they keep themselves and their habitations; the last and crowning item tells how high the people have risen in the scale of intelligence, kindness and justice. That is the measure of human progress. What a people think and write about woman, and, what is more important, their demeanor toward her, is the great index of national character. In countries where women are not respected and not permitted to express themselves in the fine arts and to take a reasonable part in professional and commercial affairs, civilization is at low ebb. The status of such a people usually rises by striking off the shackles from woman. Unhand her, give her all the freedom man should enjoy to do the right thing, and the leaven of her thought and activities is bound to elevate the whole nation .-Co-operation.

Ten years ago the immigration to the clusively Italian and Spanish. Today hia Blanca; 10,000 Poles are settled in Misiones, and 7000 Finns are arranging to be their neighbors. Bulgarians, Croats, Greeks and Turks from Asia Minor are distributed in increasing streams by the immigration offices.

The writer has personally handled hundreds of these folks on railroad work, and found them in the great majority hard working folk, both men and women. From this semi-Slav immigration to that of the far east is but a step. Japanese commercial and immigration agents are already in Buenos Aires and Rio. If the first shipments of Asiatics to the Plate are carefully handled, wisely established and well treated during their first residence there the thousands who ewait their letters will come of their own accord.-Bulletin of American Re-

The omnipresence and omnipotence of God, as Christian Science reveals it, means that good is always present and has always power over evil; and learning this and trusting this you can begin anew each day to depend upon the offices of good in all your undertakings.

First, and of greatest importance, is the distinction made by Christian Science between absolute good and the human sense of good. St. Paul declared: "For now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face." And while you "see through a glass, darkly," believing evil to have power, and relying upon a relative sense of good that is tainted with self-interest and strife, the arguments of discouragement ply their trade busily, and will disable you if they can. The Impending
Political Overturn

The crushing defeat of George W. Aldridge, Republican, by James Havens, Democrat, in the Rochester (N. Y.) congressional district yesterday, should not rightfully be regarded as due altogether to the changing political sentiment of the country; but taken in connection with the recent election of Mr. Foss in Massachusetts, and the announcement of the early retirement of Senator Hale of Maine and Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island, it will be regarded by the average citizen as simply another indication of the passing of prestige and power from the party that has for so long a time ruled the nation.

There were many causes, other than that which is operating generally at this time, behind the defeat of Mr. Aldridge, and the most potent of them were moral rather than political. Under all the circumstances the candidacy of Mr. Aldridge was taken by many as an affront to the conscience of the community and where the facts were known it occasioned little surprise that a district which has been invariably Republican for the last twenty years reversed itself. Aside from the moral and personal issues involved, there is reason to believe that the political questions raised would have, of themselves, imperiled the Republican majority.

Of very different and much greater significance is the announced determination of two of the veteran Republican leaders of the United States Senate to retire to private life. This points to the attention of the people the fact that the retirement of these "war horses" is evidently the consequence of a belief on their part that conditions are so shaping themselves as to demand new leadership for the party they have served so long and so ably.

The bill now before Congress asking for an annual appropriation of $11,000,000 for high schools in which the chief study is to be agriculture is another indication that the prescribed course of study for American boys and girls seems destined to contain more and more "fundamentals" and less "frills."

Those who carefully followed the course of the Payne tariff bill in the extra session of last year, from its consideration in the committee of ways and means to the final agreement upon its provisions in conference, must have been struck by the pertinacity of the little tariff-board section, first in seeking recognition and insertion, and later in clinging to the measure even after it had supposedly been deprived of a means of livelihood. This newspaper was one among the very few in the country to point out the importance of the section and to urge its retention in the bill. The anti-downward-revisionists and the anti-tariff-reformers generally were opposed to the retention of the provision, and when it was carried through by the determined effort of the administration, no money was appropriated whereby it could be made operative.

The friendship of the President saved it at this point. Had he been disposed to ignore it he could easily have found an excuse for doing so. His disposition was quite the reverse of this, however, and he put the provision in operation by appointing a tariff board and setting it in motion, trusting that its future would be cared for by Congress. As its work, under disadvantages and serious restrictions, has become familiar to the people and its possibilities have been revealed, public opinion in its favor has become unmistakably manifest. And now Congress, in response to this growing sentiment, is not only prepared to appropriate the money necessary to the operation of the board as it is at present organized, but to enact legislation that will strengthen it.

Now, for the first time since the protective tariff idea took root in this country, we are proceeding, through the medium of an impartial governmental agency, to obtain information that will enable us to select the industries that do and the industries that do not need protection in the interest of the consumer as well as the producer.

It is reported that although Trenton, N. J., has just put a "no seat, no fare" ordinance in force, passengers continue to pay their street car fares and to stand without protest. By paying for the right to stand up, the people of Trenton are not standing up for their rights.

FURTHER cargoes of beef and mutton from Australia will be welcomed by New Yorkers. The meat is sold 3 to 6 cents below prices asked for western products of equal quality.

The Future of Liberia

THE London correspondent of the New York Tribune communicates to that newspaper some very interesting information, drawn from recent conversations with Frank Braham, who has been engaged in African affairs for the last fifteen years, especially in Liberia, concerning the present and future of the republic founded by American negro colonization societies. Mr. Braham says that affairs have gone from bad to worse in the republic, until there is good reason why the Liberians appeal to America to save their independence. The country is on the verge of national bankruptcy. He believes that the help asked for should be granted, but only on condition that the affairs of the republic be placed in the hands of white men. He deems thorough schooling in the art of self-government a necessary preliminary to entrusting the inhabitants with funds for the future administration of the government. White labor is not needed, but the direction of negro labor by competent whites is most essential.

Attention was directed in these columns a short time ago to the indisposition of our government to meddle in Liberian affairs. Our doing so would, it is thought, involve us in diplomatic complications. Our policy—a policy strongly advised by George Washington—is to hold ourselves aloof from affairs of peculiar European concern. We have not always adhered to this policy. It is held that in the case of Liberia there is every reason why we should make an exception. Unless we take a hand in the matter, Liberia as a negro republic will soon cease to exist. It will be called an unsuccessful experiment even though it was never properly supported. Already it has lost 2000 square miles of its original domain, and the remainder of it is likely soon to be absorbed by Germany, France or England. There is yet a chance to rescue the little republic and to set it on its feet, and under better auspices than ever before. But there is only one great power in the world which could undertake the task from disinterested motives. That is the parent country, the United States, and so far we have turned a cold shoulder to all such propositions.

PRESIDENT WILSON of Princeton University thinks the colleges of this country need democratic regeneration, and declares that the American people will tolerate nothing that savors of exclusiveness.

Burgess' Flying Fish Biplane THE success of W. Starling Burgess in the trials this week of his new aeroplane, the Flying Fish, entitles him to congratulation. The Burgess biplane is the first heavier-than-air machine to leave the ground from skids. It is not equipped with wheels, as is the case with a number of other makes, which secure their momentum by a preliminary run along the ground. A. M. Herring, who designed the Flying Fish in conjunction with Mr. Burgess, first operated the biplane and then turned it over to his co-laborer. The latter, with no previous experience in motor-driven heavier-than-air craft, was able to bring two short flights to a successful close. The experiments were made at the builders' camp on Plum island, near Newburyport. New England will probably soon have an opportunity to witness navigation of the air by an aeroplane designed and constructed in its own territory.

The progress of aviation is being greatly aided by the work of college students and professors, prominent among the latter in this line of investigation being Prof. Gaetano Lanza of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. A change in the curve of a surface of only the fraction of an inch may make a difference of many pounds in its supporting power. This is a feature of construction of which Professor Lanza has been making special study.

S. F. Cody, the British-American aviator, maintains that if anything should go wrong with a flying machine, the aviator should be able to glide safely to earth, and it is therefore highly important that the lifting power of the aeroplane should be in proper proportion to the weight. There is hazard in having the engine too powerful and too heavy. Mr. Cody is of opinion that if a machine will not glide to the ground without engine power it is unsafe.

The attraction of gravitation having been overcome and speed in flight attained, the most important question yet remaining before reaching complete success in navigation of the air is that of safety, and toward this end all efforts should now be directed.

The public shows a disposition not to take seriously President Taft's implied declaration that he will serve but one term in the White House. It is remembered that other Presidents have said that they would serve but one term when the real meaning they meant to convey was that they desired but one term—at a time.

The

of the

Chamizal

A STRIP of land, part of an old Spanish grant, sometimes spoken of as the Chamizal zone, more frequently as the Chamizal, forms the extreme southern section of the thriving and rapidly expanding city of El Paso, Tex. The Chamizal came into national notice last fall when it was selected as neutral ground between the two republics, and, therefore, the most suitable territory in which the chief magistrate of the United States and the chief magistrate of Mexico could meet. It appears that the term "neutral" was applied to the strip by Mexico. Whether this is the case or not, it seems that our representatives made a mistake in admitting, even indirectly, that Mexico had any claim

El Paso is growing. The land included in all that remains of the Chamizal grant—a strip about one and a half miles long and about 3000 feet wide—is now measured by the square foot rather than by the acre as formerly, and it is rapidly rising in value. It is occupied principally by Mexicans. The question is not so much one of private ownership of land as of national jurisdiction. Under United States jurisdiction and as a part of El Paso, the Chamizal will continue, in proportion to the city's growth, to increase in value. Under Mexican jurisdiction, to say the least, the rise in Chamizal real estate can hardly be so rapid or so great. Citizens of El Paso, taking all this into consideration, have been very anxious since the meeting of the Presidents to have the question of jurisdiction decided; Secretary Knox has now taken the matter up with the Mexican government.

Owing to the terms of a boundary line convention, supplementary to the treaty of 1848, which fixed the river as the line, the old and difficult task of agreeing as to what is properly accretion and what is properly erosion presents itself in this case. In the ordinary sense the difference between accretion and erosion is widely understood, of course, but whenever the question involves the dividing line between states or countries, or ownership of property under riparian rights, it offers a beautiful opportunity for the splitting of hairs. In the supplementary convention alluded to, it was agreed, as a means of avoiding disputes caused by the ever-shifting channel of the Rio Grande, that in case of a change in the course of the river by accretion, the territory gained by either country should remain in the country into which it had been thrown, but in case of a change by erosion, the territory involved should remain the property of the country within whose borders it originally was. This looks clear enough. It would make a settlement of the Chamizal question easy if it could be established to the satisfaction of both parties that the strip of land in dispute is now on the American side as a consequence of accretion or erosion. But this is a difficult matter, and the payment by the United States of a reasonable amount for a clear title from Mexico would seem to be at once the simplest and most economical way of solving the problem.

As a result of twenty years of investigation and experiment, a chemist finds that the much-maligned skimmed milk is possessed of wonderful value. We are learning that nothing in the world is so poor that it can be justly despised.

THE Massachusetts Agricultural College men are quoted as saying that if there is any land in the commonwealth that cannot be worked for crops, it will pay to turn it into chicken farms. This is a subject on which a great many people are anxious for information, as was shown when the "Better Farming Special" made its recent tour in this state. At nearly every station numerous inquirers wanted to know what the Profit in Poultry and Eggs Amherst experts could tell them about poultry-raising. Yet in this matter the college men have not been able to work out their theories. Last year they asked for a $3000 appropriation, but the Legislature refused the request. However, Professor Gaskill has 200 fine hens, and is earnestly conducting experiments that he hopes will prove of value to the farmers. He says Cornell has given great help in teaching in this line, and if half as much can be done in this state he will be well satisfied. The college men claim that a chicken farmer can even buy all grain and other articles of the hen menu and still get results that are worth while.

It would seem that with eggs selling as they have been at 40 cents and 50 cents a dozen, egg production as an industry might be made exceedingly profitable. At a hennery run on expert lines the egg production averaged 143 for ten months, sold at an average of 50 cents per dozen. The number of laying pullets was 1953, and they produced 279,792 eggs, or 23,316 dozens. The money derived from the sale of eggs, extra pullets, broilers and fertilizing material amounted to $15,714.84, while all expenses were $3194.03, making a net profit of $12,520.81.

If our state college men, with an appropriation of $3000, can teach our poultrymen and farmers how such business as this can be done, they should have the money.

A' DEPARTMENT of recreation is proposed as a part of New York's city government, the idea being to promote the happiness and well-being of children; to regulate their games and pastimes. It is asserted that many children do not know how to play.

Decrease of the Unemployed THE statistics furnished by the recent report of the New York state department of labor to establish the fact that there was a marked improvement in the labor market in that state for 1909 as compared with 1908, seem fully to warrant the belief that the showing for the present year, not only in New York, but throughout the country, will be still more satisfactory. It hardly requires figures to prove that employment is more plentiful now than it has been at any time since 1906 or the early part of 1907. It is regrettable that hand in hand with the increased opportunities of employment should come an increase in the number of labor disputes. A strike among the house painters, which has been in progress for the last two or three weeks, while causing little excitement or comment, has meant enormous losses to employers and employees alike. This strike is typical of many, presumably the consequence of good times rather than worse.

The records of the bureau of mediation and arbitration of New York show what similar reports would exhibit elsewhere, that improved conditions as to employment and earnings are accompanied by an increase of industrial disputes. This is not difficult to account for, but it is none the less deplorable that strikes and lockouts should be so frequent at the very time when there is the greatest demand for labor.

There is a cheerful side to this matter, however, and it is most encouraging. The various state boards of mediation and arbitration as well as the national efforts looking to conciliation in labor disputes, are meeting with greater success as their methods and purposes come to be better understood. The Massachusetts board can point as proudly as any to the records and results of the last few years. Slowly but surely we are approaching the time, in this state and elsewhere, thanks to more intelligent organization and administration in the boards entrusted with the preservation of industrial peace, when labor disputes will be settled before, rather than after, the occurrence of strikes.

The baseball league to be composed exclusively of Japanese residing in six of the American Pacific coast cities will go to prove that the Japs, who have been called "the Yankees of the east," appear to have a fondness for the sports of "the Yankees of the west."

The treaty entered into by the United States and Mexico at the close of the war between the two countries declared the Pueblo Indians American citizens in equality with the Mexicans residing at the time in the newly acquired territories of the Southwest, but under territorial government these rights have been withheld from the Indians. They number about 10,000. They are, and Statehood and the Pueblos have been since remote times, a semicivilized people. Through all their years under government control, and subject practically to the same treatment as the savage tribes, they have been self-supporting and peaceable. Like "agency" Indians in general, they have been provided with schools, but their culture is their own, and they have courted isolation rather than government patronage or too close contact with the white man. Their very name indicates advancement beyond the ordinary aborigines. Their blankets and pottery command the very highest commendation of competent judges of handicraft. Their system of village government seems to be as efficient as it is simple.

The interesting problem at present is how these Indians shall be treated under state government. It would be manifestly unfair to place them on the level of the barbarous tribes. Yet it is doubtful, mainly because of their lack of interest in our institutions, whether they are fit for citizenship. Their intelligence is not disputed. It may be that their apparent indifference to our institutions is due in great part to our indifference to them, save as national wards. Possibly if the responsibility of citizenship were imposed upon them they would awaken to its privileges and be more inclined to take a deeper interest in the affairs of the country. At all events, we are under obligations to give them a full opportunity for developing into

Perhaps it will be well for us first of all to inspire the Pueblos with the idea that we are going to regard them hereafter as men and women, and not as children, incapables or inferiors.
